W. P. Thompson's Nedna, admirably ridden by Frankie Keogh, had the honor of winning the classic by nearly two lengths after a thrilling fight with the favorite throughout the stretch. Harry Payno Whitney's Prudish, which was coupled with Nedna because of the fact that both mares are trained by the wizard, Jimmy Rowe, was beaten for the place as far as Nedna won from Emotion. H. S. he looks every inch the victor. He had long planned to visit his father and mother, but was compelled to defer the visit until it was certain the journey would not impair his health. "I'm feeling pretty good," "Big Six" told his interviewer to-day, "I'm not entirely weil, but I can't complain. No, I'm not home for good," he replied to another question. "This is only a visit to mother and father.

"Will I ever go back to the diamond again? Well, I haven't given that much thought. You see, I want to get entirely well before I even consider that question. I may leave Saranac Lake permanently next spring, or it may be a year from next spring, It's a funny allment and a fellow don't know when year from next spring. It's a funny silment and a fellow don't know when he'll change for the worse. I may be getting along fine for six months or so and then suddenly take a relapse. I have to be careful, get lots of rest and sleep."
